

Some 50 years ago the RECs in the Wapa area made the decision to pay more per kilowatt to make the Dam building project work. In return they sign longterm contracts to receive 24/7 power. They saw it as power supply that would be there for years to come, beside all the other benefits that a control waterway would provide. Let the other renewable pay their own way and though that what them. We have been paying our way long before it was cool to say renewable.

Marion Denger, Prairie Energy Cooperative